

Lucretia - wrap top

By: irmchen

<http://www.burdastyle.com/projects/lucretia-wrap-top>

This time I am completely satisfied with my wrap top! Since a while now I tried constantly to create my own jersey wrap top. Look at the last pics: In the beginning I was inspired by the vintage pattern simplicity 5018 and then I liked the asymmetrie of the white blouse from Byron Lars. I also sewed the asymmetrical jersey skirt which matches nicely with the top, I think. Whenever I will find time I will share my pattern, using this tutorial May be there is someone in the community who has the same measurements like me (german size 42).

Materials

romanit jersey

Step 1 — Lucretia - wrap top

Here comes exactly the pattern I used to sew my wrap top.
The pattern is based on a close-fitting body basic pattern without any darts.
Please make sure that the sleeves are not too narrow! I have rather thin (upper) arms!
Use some crosswise elastic jersey. Don't try these bi-elastic jerseys which acts like bubblegum!!!
I don't add some sewing instructions because this will took too much time for me because I don't know the sewing relevant vocabulary. Sorry for that!

Download pattern:

The free program posterazer
was used to digitalize the pattern.
Check it out! It is self-explainig how to arrange the pattern sheets.

Each page is overlapping about 2cm (0,78 inch) at the right side and at the bottom.
These zones are marked pink in the overview.

One thing I is also to mention:There is an elastic waistband which should be placed on your natural waist line. You take that liite rectangle piece (which you have to modifie in its length so that the elastic can be attached to the correct hight.

Step 2 — viewed from the left side

...

Step 3 — closure with velcro tape

...

Lucretia - wrap top